Webber gives Heat from the Heart

BANGOR, MAINE—Webber Energy Fuels has teamed up with WGME and The Salvation Army to help Maine families stay warm this winter. On October 30, WGME held a one-day telethon, “Heat from the Heart” to raise donations enabling The Salvation Army to purchase home heating fuel for Maine residents. Dave Martin, VP/Retail Manager for Webber Energy Fuels, was on hand to present the Company’s donation of 1,000 gallons of #2 home heating oil.

“In light of these challenging economic times, we want to reach out to assist other good organizations who are there to serve families in desperate need. Webber’s reputation is one of providing peace of mind to our customers. We hope our donation will, in some small part, ease the worry of folks who are wondering how they can keep their families safe and warm this season,” stated Dave Martin.

In addition to this singular donation, during the months of November and December, Webber is also enabling Maine people to register with local radio and cable stations to win more than 1,200 gallons of #2 home heating oil throughout a promotional campaign for its Webber Watchdog Service.
